The aim of this thesis is to translate a chapter from Callum MacDonald's The Killing of Reinhard Heydrich, the SS "Butcher of Prague" and to provide a commentary of the translation. The commentary consists of four parts. The first part is an overall translation analysis of the original text. The second part discusses the typology of translation problems, analyzing specific problems of cultural and linguistic non-equivalence and explaining the translator's decisions. The third part comments on the typology of translation shifts. The fourth, final part describes the translation method that has been selected. The source text is to be found in the annex.