Abstract

This bachelor thesis is focused on the cooperation of a practical nurse and a nursing assistant during providing nursing care at a long-term care facility. The first part deals with general informations connected with a topic such as a characteristic of long-term care facility. There belongs for example charter summarizing chosen diagnosis related to geriatrics and the issues of ADL and IADL, which originated from the matter of self-care.

The second part aims attention to research. It is based on particular long-term care facility – the development at the beginning up to the present. The informations about facility includes staff, material and technical support. Also includes the organisation of facility including system of handing of work shift and the assigning of a patient. Last but not least it points at cooperation and explores communication in fields as hygiene, nourishment, evacuation, elimination and mobility.