

Abstract (in English):

This bachelor's thesis is focused on the graduates of the Faculty of Arts at Charles University and their perceived strengths and weaknesses of the labor market. In the thesis we are examining these strengths and weaknesses, the differentiation according to the field of study, and how the strengths and weaknesses are connected with the initial salary, difficulty with finding an occupation and their evaluation of how they were prepared for the labor market during their studies. Their subjectively perceived strengths and weaknesses are compared to skills searched by employers on the labor market. In the end, we discuss the position of universities according to employability of their graduates on the labor market.
