

The main goal of this thesis is a design and an implementation of a tool for analysis of flight data which are produced by AgentFly simulation. The user can load flight messages in CMS format and process them. The thesis contains a basic set of statistical tests, which are used to filter flights. The implementation focuses on an easy extension of the set of test cases and new message formats.