

Abstract

The aim of this bachelor thesis is the theoretical description of the functioning of two parametric nonlinearity tests - the RESET test and Keenan's test and their application on financial time series with the summary of achieved results. During the testing we assume, that a time series follows a predetermined linear AR(p) model the order of which is identified by the partial autocorrelation function or the AIC criterion.