

Abstract

This master's thesis focuses on Josef Hiršal's work in its entirety. The core will be a literary-historical material research, based on which there will be a complete annotated bibliography (which still does not exist) prepared. The bibliography will consist of Hiršal's original work (poetic and prosaic) and also his translations. It will be structured in a chronological order and it will map out period critiques and other responses to Hiršal's works. The bibliography will be preceded by a short summary characteristics of Hiršal's life and his work throughout the years and there will also be a nominal and an objective index.
