

The Schrodinger's equation and the diffusion equation can be written in a similar form. While the Schrodinger's equation is complex, the diffusion equation is real. In this thesis we wish to outline similarities of both equations. We present a way to treat a problem in non-relativistic quantum mechanics as a diffusion process. This shows that under certain circumstances both theories are equivalent. We demonstrate this on a few simple examples.