ADDITIONAL WRITTEN COMMENTS

Glasgow Marker

This dissertation seeks to investigate the reasons behind the failure to achieve a common defence market in the European Union. To do so, it seeks to apply the concept of "military-industrial complex" (MIC), focusing mostly, or almost entirely, on one aspect of the complex: the role of the military industry. The section on Italy is supported by adequate secondary as well as primary sources – though the added value of the interview is not entirely clear. The analysis, moreover, would have benefited from a more thorough analysis of the interaction between the three dimensions of the MIC. A greater effort could have been made to situate the issue of public procurement within the broader literature on integration in the area of security and defence policies in the European Union, as well as to situate the case of Italy in relation to other European countries. Nevertheless, the author should be commended for his attempt to engage with a very difficult and timely topic, and to bring together various strands of the literature in International Relations and International Security. This is, overall, a good piece which could be used for further research.

Charles Marker

The dissertation deals with a timely and topical issue of European defence market and its ineffectiveness. The author conscientiously and passionately builds up an argument based on the concept of the military-industrial complex and the interests of the national defence industry. The case of Italian national champion is a good illustration of the author's argument. Moreover, several interviews reinforce the author's insight.

On a more critical note, the text is far longer than the argument and its substantiation deserve. Although the argument is reasonable and believable, the empirical evidence can substantiate it only partially. Moreover, the text is excessively repetitive. I do not see any reason why there is a need for the third chapter. The Conclusion does the same work quite adequately.

Despite certain weaknesses, the author presents a competent and consciously prepared dissertation on an important issue.

Notes for Markers: When grading the SECINTEL Dissertation markers are asked to reflect upon the aims and learning outcomes for the dissertation. Each dissertation should also adopt a clear security focus reflecting the relevant programme pathway

Aims: The course aims to provide students with independent research opportunities. It will include engagement with research methods training leading up to a period of independent research and the production of a substantial dissertation that builds upon themes and issues covered within the MSc International Security, Intelligence and Strategic Studies. Students will be encouraged to develop their own ideas and demonstrate their capacity for original thought and independent research. The dissertation element aims to enable students to identify and research particular issues or problems, linked to security, intelligence and strategy, at a deeper level than is possible within assessed essays and to develop a critical analysis of the existing body of academic work relating to their topic of choice. Students taking this course will be prepared for further research, study or professional careers through the development of their skills in data collection and analysis, use of original and secondary sources and the conducting and writing up of a detailed research project.

Intended Learning outcomes: By the end of the dissertation, students will be able to:

- > Devise a realistic programme of research on a topic reflecting the main themes of the programme;
- > Collect, select and critically analyse relevant background literature and arguments of a range of scholars;
- > Understand and select the appropriate methodology for dealing with information sources and data;
- > Apply these methods to gather and interrogate data in an open-minded, rigorous and undogmatic manner;
- > Be able to critically evaluate competing theories and apply relevant theoretical frameworks to guide the study
- > Organise the data collected and analyse the findings in a competent manner that allows for a fluid and logical argument to be presented;
- > Be reflexive and self-critical about findings and the limitations of analysis;
- > Work independently, organising and maintaining own programme of study to meet academic deadlines so as to produce work containing a substantial element of originality.

Word Count:

Dissertations should be 20,000 words in length for students undertaking work-placement as part of the independent study portfolio and 22,000 words in length for standard dissertation students. Word counts exclude the title page, abstract, contents, bibliography and appendices). There is a 10% leeway for words above the upper limit, but no leeway for dissertation that fall under the word requirement. All dissertations must display an accurate word-count including the citations, footnotes/endnotes and chapter/section titles. One point (on the Glasgow 22-point scale) will be deducted for each 750 words under the minimum or over the 10% upper limit.

Language:

The dissertation must be written in British English. A Czech Language cover page / abstract may be included

Late Submission Penalty:

Dissertations that do not have an extension or are submitted after an extension deadline are subject to a penalty of 2 secondary bands per day (this includes weekends and holidays) on the Glasgow grading Scale.

Plagiarism:

Dissertations which suffer from excessive (e.g. serious and/or deliberate) plagiarism will be subject to a grade of 0/Fail and be referred to the appropriate authorities at both universities. Dissertations that contain some elements of plagiarism, but which are deemed not to be excessive (e.g. minor instances that are not considered deliberate) based on consultation of both internal markers, should be graded accordingly and will be subject to scrutiny from the external examiner and could still result in a mark of 0 as well as referral to appropriate authorities for disciplinary action.

Consultation prior to final grading:

First marking by both institutions should be completed blind with no prior consultation. Once both markers have graded the dissertation and provided written comments, they should consult on the grading and come to a joint final grade, taking into consideration any late submission or excessive word count penalty. It is the responsibility of the Glasgow marker to oversee this. Where markers cannot come to a joint agreement then the dissertation should be referred to the Programme Convenors at Glasgow and Charles (Dr. Eamonn Butler & Dr Vít Střítecký). The external examiner will be used to moderate any dissertation in this position and the comments referred back to the internal markers for confirmation.
