

Summary

Presented thesis entitled Juvenile men in their sentence of imprisonment and their self-respect support tries to find out the possibilities of self-respect support by juvenile men in their sentence of imprisonment.

The work is divided into three parts.

The first part, including two chapters, deals with a theoretical scope of the theme on the basis of specialist literature. The first chapter determines a term of self-respect, compares its different definitions and presents self-respect in spiritual context. It concentrates on juvenile imprisoned men self-respect and secondary prevention programmes offered by prisons.

The second chapter summarizes practical possibilities and sources of self-respect support. It explores the usage of elements of secondary prevention of delinquency and pastoral care. It summarizes possibilities of self-respect support of juvenile imprisoned men and difficulties in work with a target group.

The second part presents a qualitative research made by the author in the period of two years, primarily in prisons. The research activities (group and individual interviews, documents' analysis) were aimed at discovering factors that endanger self-respect of sentenced persons, and also realistic ways of support. The research sums up the analysis output and shows its role in the third part of the thesis.

The third part includes a project of self-knowledge programme of prevention for juveniles threatened or affected by delinquent behaviour. The programme tool is represented by an attached set of work sheets. In their structure and content theoretical findings are connected with those from the terrain, and observations of specialists and respondents who voluntarily verified the applicability of the tool in practis are taking into consideration.