

ABSTRACT

The bachelor thesis deals with the issue of the free schools in the Czech Republic. The basic perspectives of the thesis are anthropological, sociological and also philosophical. The bachelor thesis deals mainly with the context of cultural and education, and the place of free schools in the current system of education and culture. Furthermore, it focuses on a problem of the influence of free schools on pupils in the view of their possible future application in a society. One of the key questions of the thesis is: What contribution would the free schools have for the personal development of an individual in the Czech cultural environment. A part of the bachelor thesis includes the visits of free schools, observations and qualitative research by interviews. The aim of the thesis is to reflect the habits of free schools and their role in the context of Czech culture.
