

Bachelor thesis: Typology of roman medical and surgical instruments and their use in civilian and military environments and their display in iconography

Annotation:

Bachelor thesis focuses on description of individual roman medical and surgical instruments, their parts and usage options. I also want to summarize the known informations about Roman physicians and compare their work in civilian and military environments according to the findings of their instruments in the territory of the Roman Empire, both in mainland Italy and in the provinces. In the last part of the bachelor's thesis I will describe the display of instruments, medics and their practices in iconography.
