

Political Culture and Voting Behaviour of Students

Abstract

In this bachelor thesis, the subject of empirical research is to analyze the relationship of political culture and electoral behavior of students of Czech students. The term political culture means political attitudes and the orientation of individuals towards politics and the political system. Political culture manifests itself in participation or in the political competence of citizens. The aim of the research is to determine the effects of sociodemographic characteristics on the political attitudes of Czech university students. Furthermore, the aim of this project is to find out the character of relationship of political attitudes and the electoral behavior of respondents. The empirical part is based on the evaluation of the quantitative questionnaire survey, which is carried out by collecting data through social networks. The method of evaluating the questionnaires is to describe the frequencies of specific political attitudes and to determine relationships with other values.

Keywords:

political culture, voting behaviour, students