

Abstract

This Bachelor thesis explores the phenomenon of Russian grammar schools in interwar Czechoslovakia, especially Russian Reformed Real Grammar School in Prague and Russian Reformed Real Grammar School in Moravská Třebová. It briefly discusses the creation of Russian Aid Action and school system, which was created for Russian emigration. After that the Bachelor thesis describes the circumstances of the formation and closure of Russian grammar schools, their normal course, the content of their teaching plan and extracurricular activities of the students.