

Abstract (in English):

This thesis is focused on analysis of vulgar lexicon used mainly by young Koreans. It includes definition of vulgarisms in Czech and Korean. Describes problems with their classification and uncertainties in definitions. Includes brief description of word-forming processes crucial for vulgar language. Defines thematic categories of vulgarisms and provides their examples. Core of this thesis is analysis of selected lexical units based on pattern of their usage obtained from online survey. The survey was conducted in January 2018 and ended with over three thousand respondents. In analysis of lexical units section describes available etymology, analyzes distribution of lexeme and provides graphs of frequency and distribution forms. Analysis of selected words is divided into subchapters and is in order from the most frequented to the least. This thesis also includes short dictionary.