

Summary

In this bachelor thesis we are examining collocations of basic colour terms in Czech and Russian. The thesis consists of two parts: theoretical and practical. The theoretical part is focused on explaining the basic linguistics terms of lexicology, frazeology and corpus linguistics. It will then present the criteria for defining the basic colours terms in both languages based on Berlin and Kay's theory. The practical part is focused on contrastive analysis of the basic colour terms using in Czech and Russian based on the evaluation of the dictionary materials and data was found in the Czech National Corpus and the National Corpus of Russian Language.
