

ABSTRACT

Experiences of the students and their attitudes to the addictive drugs Simona Fleischlingerová

The main dissertation's aim has been to find out the attitudes of the students of the third year of Faculty of Pharmacy in Hradec Králové to smoking and compare this with the results, which were given from the students of Medicine, Stomatology and Nursing.

The data were compiled from the individual completed questionnaire.

The conclusions didn't show important differences in attitudes and opinions to smoking among the individual medical field of study.

The importance of the smoking restriction in the closed room, the position of the medic as a consultant in stopping smoking and the knowledge of the therapy of nicotine addiction – These are students' opinions, which are very positive.
