Abstract

The bachelor thesis deals with the problem of self-service training in children of younger school age with mental retardation. The work contains definitions of mental retardation and activities of everyday life with an emphasis on self-care. The aim of the bachelor thesis is to create an educational plan for a particular girl with moderate mental retardation, which is focused on the practice of self-service activities that could be applied in practice.