

A methodic study of transdermal in vitro delivery of drugs.

Abstract

The master thesis brings a short outline of transdermal bioequivalence. The possibility of the using of an in vitro permeation experimental design to quantification of transkarbam 12 as the enhancer in dermatologic creams of a real composition was evaluated using pig ear skin model and caffeine as the permeation marker.