

ABSTRACT

Bachelors Thesis Consequences of the hip developmental dysplasia on the musculoskeletal system in childhood and adulthood is processed in the form of case study research. Introduction of the theoretical part contains basic information about anatomy and kinesiology of healthy hip joint, its etiology and pathogenesis, options of diagnostics and treatment. In the last section of the theoretical part are described consequences of this diagnosis in patients. The last section contains a case study of a patient with developmental dysplasia of the hip, which regularly visits rehabilitation.