

Abstract

The influence of projects from Operational program „Podnikání a inovace“ on the regional development of Tachov district

The main goal of bachelor thesis is the research of influence of subsidies from operational program „Podnikání a inovace“ on the regional development of Tachov district. The attention is engaged on description of peripheral Then there are promoted outlets of European regional policy including „operational programs“ and their connection with czech developmental documents. Through impact of developmental projects on companies there is described influence of subsidies on local economy, particularly from standpoint of additional value. According to research there is described position of companies within value chains including influence of subsidies in upgrading of these positions. The main benefit of thesis is revelation of influence of research and development infrastructure on local economy and then, identification resources of another competitiveness. In additional there is designed recommendation for future local development.

Key words: EU regional policy, regional development, Operational program „Podnikání a inovace“, local economy