

The goal of this study is to present comparison of today's most widely used cryptographic hash functions and compare them with drafts of new hash functions, which are being currently developed for Advanced Hash Standard competition. This study also includes implementation of all described functions in programming language C#.