Course of defence: The students tried to study the influence of interest groups (insurance companies) in health policy of Czech Republic. In his thesis, he proposes a process in which the interest groups try to influence the procedure of passing a law most. However, his work met with a lot of “harsh criticism” by the opponent. In his work, he inferred causality based on correlation. He was not able to fully grasp all factors that came into the process, and thesis appeared very vague, and not fulfilled demanding standards of opponent and student himself.
