

Abstract

Diploma thesis deals with analysis of organization and ideological structure of the Czech Pirate Party. The goal is to find out and describe how the Czech Pirate Party looks like from organization perspective. Another aim is to find out how party interpret itself from point of view of ideological background. It was discovered by the questionnaire with members of party and by the content analysis of election programme from last general election of Czech parliament in 2017. I will apply the theoretical model of multi-speed membership party according to Susan E. Scarrow into the questionnaire. The question is if the Czech Pirate Party fits into theoretical concept. Which means that the theoretical base is the model of multi-speed membership party then theoretical concept of party family and index of accessibility.

Diploma thesis is divided into six chapters. Firstly it will be presented the theoretical part which contains three chapters. First chapter represents network party model, multi-speed membership party and introduction about the Czech Pirate Party. The introduction will be about emergence of party, circumstance of emergence and then will be presented another significant foreign pirate parties. The theoretical part is finished by description of organization structure of party. Practical part is divided into three chapters as well. First chapter is about content analysis of election programme of general election of Parliament in 2017 with application of concept of party family. Next chapter is dedicated about application of index of accessibility into party website of Czech Pirate Party. Last chapter deals with evaluation of results of questionnaire where was applied the concept of multi-speed membership party and concept of party family as well. In conclusion are evaluated results of paper and if the goals are fulfilled and answered research questions.