

Annotation

The topic of my bachelor's thesis is: „Cardiopulmonary resuscitation of adults in prehospital immediate care – process at paramedics' teams“. I have chosen this topic because I suppose the cardiopulmonary resuscitation is the most recent and important matter which everybody should be aware of and not to be afraid of.

My thesis consists of two parts: the theory and research. The theoretical part consists of cardiopulmonary resuscitation provided by paramedics in premedical immediate care, which is divided further more into airways, circulation, breathing, defibrillation, ECG, fluid and drug. The research part includes the process at paramedics' teams and particular standards refer to a cardiopulmonary resuscitation in prehospital immediate care according to the new „Guidelines 2005“.

I hope that I have provided the reader with a complete information of the above mentioned topic so that it can be used as a study material.
