

Abstract

This thesis is about some of Korean religious groups in the Czech Republic, especially the Unification Church and the Church of God. In the first part, it introduces those groups and their origin in our country. In the second part, it focuses on the growth of those groups. The main aim of this work is a degree of their openness and a method of obtaining new members – how they prepare for speaking out to those potential members, how the speaking out thing actually function, and what impact does language barrier and cultural differences have on this mission work.
