

Abstract

This bachelor thesis deals with the topic of the activities of the Russian-speaking minority in contemporary Prague. The thesis deals with the mapping of the development of Russian immigration in the territory of today's Czech Republic during the 20th century, as well as the current state of the Russian minority. The thesis maps out some of the active organizations that the Russian-speaking minority creates, as well as organizations that help integrate Russian immigrants into the Czech environment.

Keywords

Contemporary Russian emigration; Russian society activities; Russian minority; society activities