

Abstract:

In this thesis, on selected examples of everyday life, I deal with the issue of resocialization of former political prisoners from the 1950s after their return from prison. On selected biographical narratives, I point to personal ways of reintegration into society, whose main ideology was the cause of their persecution. From their memories I choose the basic spheres of life such as family, personal and social life, employment and the issue of rehabilitation not only at the personal but also at the social level. A special chapter is also devoted to the descendants of former political prisoners, whose memories illustrate the view of everyday life after their imprisonment and the subsequent return of their parents and thus reveal the real impact of persecution activities of the communist regime in Czechoslovakia.
