

Author's first name and surname: Martin Koupal

Title of the master thesis: Content comparative of climbing training at selected units of Integrated Rescue System of the Czech Republic

Department: Department of military physical training

Supervisor: Mgr. Erik Barták

The year of presentation: 2007

Abstrakt:

Goals: The aim of a study was to find out a state of the climbing training for professional rescue teams in Czech Republic and to compare results with climbing training in the Army of Czech Republic. Therefore it was necessary to collect needful literature and to carry out own research.

Method: The information important for this pilot study were ensured by analyze of gather documents and by selected forms of qualitative interview. Semi standardize interview with use of probe questions was a concrete method.

Results: The results light up a particular elements of climbing training system and contributed to notice a possible deficiencies with possibility of their reparation and to ensure knowledge and skills increase within this branch.

Key words: Integrated Rescue System, emergency situation, rescue operation, military climbing, height level and open depth work.