We explore the conductivity of Dirac electrons in the terahertz range, especially in graphene. We are trying to find a boundary condition that is suitable both for the eigen states around the Dirac points and the nanocrystalline structure of graphene. Ultimately we analyze the conductivity of these bound states.