

Abstract

Title: Interpersonal relationships and team roles of RC Mountfield Říčany

Objectives: The main goal of the thesis is to find out the current interpersonal relationships in the male A team of RC Mountfield Říčany and possible comments or complaints on current situation. The thesis should help head coach to determine interpersonal relationships and team roles of the players. It should help him with leading the team, possibly to consider qualified decisions about personal changes.

Methods: The main part of the thesis was done by a quantitative method – an anonymous questionnaire which was distributed to the players. Also, there were used two semi-structured interviews which is a qualitative method.

Results: The results bring mostly positive information about the current interpersonal relationships among the team. Also, there were discovered areas where players are seeking an improvement and a change. Especially, young players would like to unite the team across the groups of different age. The thesis revealed three main informal leaders who it can be work with on bringing the team more together.

Key words: interpersonal relationships, team roles, rugby