

There are plenty of social networks which we use every day, though just a few of them do not follow the mainstream design in the form of infinitely long news feed with posts from people the user is interested in and the possibility of private communication using a chat or a private call. However, this project is in 3D space where every user controls his own character in a room full of other users. The 3D space with the modular design of the app adds a feature of extensibility in form of apps, where an app can be an object placed in the room, 2D app in menu interface, or an app controlling logic of the room.
