

Abstract (in English):

The bachelor thesis deals with the role of non-profit organizations in the integration of young people from children's homes into adult life in the Czech Republic. The first part of the thesis describes the system of alternative educational care in our country, outlines the problems that young people may face after leaving children's homes and the possibilities of support offered by the state and individual non-profit organizations. In the second part, the use of the services of non-profit organizations by individual young adults who have experience with a stay in a children's home is mapped using a qualitative survey. The objective of the thesis is to map the role of non-profit organizations that assist the integration of young adults from children's homes into adult life.
