

ABSTRACT

The thesis deals with conditions of the emergence, extent, limitation and exclusion of the responsibility of the hosting type information society providers (ISP) for the foreign content, within the context of the communication to the public of the copyrighted work. The relevant provisions of national law are specified and critically analysed in the thesis. The thesis focuses on the legal construct of the safe harbour and impacts on the information society providers, considering the effective laws and the case law of the courts.