Abstract

The diploma thesis entitled "Administrative infractions in construction law" focuses on the law of administrative infractions and the specifics of the basic facts of administrative infractions in the field of construction law. The diploma thesis is divided into two parts, namely the general part and the special part. The general part of the thesis aims to introduce the basics of the law of administrative infraction – it consists of the definition of the concept of an administrative infraction and analyses of its basic attributes, the definition of the conditions of liability of individuals, legal entities, and enterprising individuals in administrative infractions and introduction of the issue of administrative penalties, their functions, principles, and basic principles and aspects of their imposition with a closer focus on the administrative penalty of the fine and the principles of determining its amount, for the fine is an administrative penalty that is imposed for administrative infractions under the Building Act. The special part of the diploma thesis addresses the introduction of the system of administrative infractions in the Building Act and includes a thorough analysis of the facts of administrative infractions under the Building Act with emphasis on the administrative infractions of general entities and the administrative infractions of builders. The aim of the special part of the thesis is to clarify the facts of administrative infractions under the Building Act based on the analysis of relevant institutes of building law, as well as defining the obligations of responsible persons and consequences of violations of these obligations from the law of administrative infractions and describing the possibility of sanctions under the Building Act. The special part of the thesis also tries to reflect the problematic aspects of some facts of administrative infractions in the construction law in terms of case law and praxis and to illustrate the effectiveness of punishment of administrative infractions in construction law and the degree of fulfillment of basic principles of administrative punishment, i.e. the principle of repression, individual prevention, and general prevention, when punishing administrative infractions under the Building Act.
