

The aim of this thesis is to analyze the problematics of bilingualism in aphasiology. The first part addresses the problematics of bilingualism in general. The second part provides information about various types of aphasia and explores these conditions in bilingual patients. The third part includes a language profile test, which was administered to intact bilinguals. Lastly, the possibility of usage of this test for diagnostic purposes is considered.