TUČKOVÁ, Tereza. Social activation services for families with children in the town of Rakovník. Prague 2021. The diploma thesis. Charles University, Prague. Hussite Theological Faculty. Department of Psychosocial Sciences and Ethics. Thesis supervisor Mgr. Barbora Racková.

This diploma thesis is divided into theoretical and practical part and is realized through qualitative research, in the form of interviews with clients.

Initially, the theoretical part deals with and explains the general facts that will help to more easily understand the whole issue. Here we find the concept of social work, social worker, prejudices against social workers and it also marginally deals with the ethics of social work. Subsequently, the concept of family is explained, I try to point out the importance of family for each of us. Furthermore, social work with the family, family rehabilitation. We will also find an explanation of the term of social activation service for families with children here. It is described first in general and then specifically in the town of Rakovník.

The practical part consists, as it has already been mentioned, of qualitative research which is developed in the form of semi-structured interviews with clients. It contains research and partial questions, which have been answered by in total of three users of social activation services for families with children in Rakovník. Each question has been briefly commented.

The approach of the social activation service in Rakovník was the aim for his thesis and then to find out and verify its effect on clients. I consider the goal of the work has been successfully fulfilled. Thanks to the reflection, I have tried for certain suggestions and recommendations for the future practice.
