

Abstract

This bachelor thesis deals with the motive of journey, specifically with biblical journeys of Abraham and Jacob. It tells not only of the places, where their journeys lead, but mainly of the unique practice, experiences and relationships, which form these prophets and shape up their lives. The goal of the thesis is to unveil the evolution process of their relationship to God during their life journeys. The work describes the progress in deepening of faith within the life tests, hesitation within fulfillment of the Lord's challenges, same as the confirmation of the fidelity and allegiance to the one and only God. Part of this thesis consists of update of two ancient stories. It compares the life journeys of the biblical patriarchs with the life journeys of the modern history personalities.
