

Abstract

The bachelor thesis is dealing with the causes of women's homelessness and introduces risk factors which are connected with the role and life of homeless woman. The target group are young women aged from 18 to 26 years who live in Prague. The theoretical part at first introduces the issue of homelessness in general, it also describes the target group – its specifics, and in conclusion this part describes the tools of social work with homeless people. The data for the practical part of the work are gained by the method of questionnaire survey. The respondents are young homeless women. Based on the research carried out, the most common reasons for homelessness and its risk factors were mapped.
