

Abstract

This paper „Drug Control Policy of EU, CR and Germany within the context of social development“ deals with the problem of drug use and addiction as a social problem not only of drug users but also the whole society. It is also a global issue occurring in nearly all countries. Drug use is a complex matter that is why complex ways of fighting against it (such as prevention or moderation of its negative impacts) are strongly required - which means to make a drug control policy. Drug control policy can have many forms. I have focused on three different approaches to drugs: of the EU, the CR and Germany. I have searched for their common features as well as differences. Apart from this I pay attention to analysis of initiatives targeted on drug control policy.
