

In the theoretical part of my work, at first I deal with the phenomenon of domestication of animals, its descent on today's civilization and usage in common welfare - for animals, and also for people. In families, who decided to provide a pet, plays an important role correct selection and convenient conditions for its breeding. I set the biggest accent on the meaning of animals in the therapeutical area - in so called Pet therapy. In detail I write about therapeutical usage of dogs, cats and horses. The target group became for me children of older school age, but I also mention some examples of impact of the positive influence of pets to adult population. An important part of having pets is the ability to balance with its death. All the mentioned themes in the theoretical part are further described in the practical section of my work. I made a research at Prague's grammar schools and its results are detailed written in the second part of this work.
