

Abstract

The theme of the bachelor thesis is the Migration Policies of Poland after 1989. The aim of this work is to present a comprehensive overview of the development of migration policies of Poland and also to point out the approach of Poland in this context, including shortcomings and possible solutions. The main thematic form includes elemental theoretical concepts such as migration, immigration, integration, and these are further developed in the context of specific legislative changes that Poland has made since 1989 in the field of migration policies. At the same time, the main reasons leading to these changes are presented, which can be divided into two parts in the structure of the thesis, namely the reasons for legislative changes and changes in approach in the context of Poland's democratization after 1989 and secondly. motivation for further legislative changes associated with the accession of Poland to the European Union in 2004. The empirical part of the thesis interprets the conclusions obtained by research and detailed analysis in the theoretical part in the form of a discussion on migration issues in Poland.
