

The objective of this thesis was to map use of physical and sports games within the older school-age children leisure time. The survey was carried out in Eastern Bohemia, and results were compared with work focused on the younger school-age children from Tabor town. Thereby, I compared the interrelationship of age and interest of pupils in game type sports activities.