

The thesis summarizes significant information about the treatment system of nonalcoholic drug users in the Czech Republic with focus on the problematic group of women drug users. It describes psychoterapeutic approaches to clients and their families in the process of treatment. It mentions the specifics of approach to women drug users and describes some institutions offering services for this specific group in the Czech Republic. It also brings some examples of women drug users treatment from other European countries and from the USA.

Key words: treatment system of non-alcoholic drug users, women, drugs, pregnancy, treatment centers.