

This thesis deals with the free time as a specific part of human life. It defines contemporary conception of the term "free time" and explains free time spending specificities of primary school pupils.

It surveys contemporary trends of free time spending of the second grade primary school pupils via questionnaire research.

Following the results of this research and individual survey of free time possibilities in Jihlava, it suggests free time program for school year 2008/2009 with respect to current limitations which emerged from the survey of current free time spending reality.