

This work studies antenna noise temperature computation. The antenna noise temperature is calculated directly from its definition. Thus, it is necessary to rotate the antenna radiation pattern. Euler matrix is used to rotate the radiation pattern. This work includes software for the antenna noise temperature computation. It calculates antenna noise temperature from the radiation pattern based measured or simulated data and from measured or predefined environment noise temperature.