

The topic of my thesis I chose because for a long time I meet women damage to health caused by work . In his practice to rehabilitation department during the study physiotherapy, and then in daily practice , I have been in contact with women working in the past Rukavičkářských races Dobříš or currently working in smaller establishments engaged in the manufacture of gloves. The rehabilitation was running mostly for long-standing problems with musculoskeletal system . According to personal communication with the seamstresses were damage to health caused by work . I wondered which of musculoskeletal disorders really impairment of work are . Musculoskeletal disorders in fact appeared in women working in other professions. I deal with the question of what the seamstresses work gloves and How can it affect the emergence of musculoskeletal diseases. I focused mainly on carpal tunnel syndrome, as one of the occupational diseases (according to the current list of diseases occupational ) , in which the incidence in the last few years have seen a rising trend.
