

Annotation

This bachelor's thesis deals with prestige of nurse profession in Czech society.

The theoretical part characterizes profession of nurse, her roles in the past and nowadays, a job descriptions and difficulty of this job. This thesis is aimed at professional prestige of nurse and possibility of interference in the prestige (the image, professional activities, management, examination, education, finances). The thesis is engaged in a social perception and factors which may affect community view to the nurses.

The empirical part contains a quantitative research into opinions of nurses and general public to a social situation of this job. There are used questionnaires which are mainly closed questions in. There are compared answers of nurses and public in the results.