

ABSTRACT

The aim of my bachelor's thesis is to map the attitudes and life expectations of girls after leaving the juvenile delinquency center (institutional care center). In the theoretical part are explained the basic concepts related to the topic of institutional education, described the common reasons for placement in the institution, the principle of operation of a comprehensive system of this form of alternative care, this part also focuses on specific impact of institutional care on development of the child, the structure of the institutional care center and its internal rules. The thesis also mentions behavioral disorders, the adolescence associated with self-concept in adolescence and also describes the concept of attitudes. The practical part of the work focuses in more detail on the plans and ambitions of the respondents using the method of semi-structured interview. Next step was data analysis using the method of open coding and data interpretation. The research sample consists of 7 girls aged 17-18 who will be leaving the educational institution in the foreseeable future. The data analysis reveals specific categories of plans and attitudes which are identical to the theoretical facts presented in the first part of the work.
