Title:

Legal and Economic Aspects of Foreign Direct Investment with Reference to Taiwan

Abstract:

The thesis on "Legal and Economic Aspects of Foreign Direct Investment with Reference to Taiwan" consists of two main parts, which are divided into eight chapters. The thesis uses the methods of secondary source analysis, synthesis, and comparison. The thesis is mainly based on domestic and foreign literature, foreign legislation, documents and data of international organizations published on their websites, academic articles, textbooks, and economic studies.

The first part of the thesis deals with the general issue of foreign direct investment in four chapters, both from the legal and economic points of view. The thesis introduces the reader to the definitions of investment and investor, the nature and meaning of investment, the standards of treatment of investment, and, last but not least, its legal regulation. This section aims to provide a comprehensive overview of the various aspects of foreign direct investment protection, which will provide a well-rounded insight into the subject.

In the second practically oriented part, the thesis analyses foreign direct investment in Taiwan. In particular, it examines Taiwan's investment environment, its positives, negatives, the regulation of foreign direct investment, as well as the development and characteristics of the Taiwanese economy. The thesis answers the question of why and in which sector it is worthwhile to invest in Taiwan.

The topic of this thesis is nowadays relevant, especially because Taiwan is a very attractive destination for investment and because of the very good political and trade Czech-Taiwanese relations. However, this destination is overlooked by the Czech Republic in terms of investment, despite the very active Taiwanese policy of promotion of foreign direct investment.
