

Summary

Bachelor's thesis „Theological and ethical accents at Sirach“ had the task of finding out what are the most important theological and moral emphases in deutoronomy book of Sirach. By studying and thorough reading was has been detected theological accents like the glory and greatness of God, characteristics of God and his creative actions. Other theological accents was been detected the living in the fear and obedience of God and the appearance and action of Wisdom. Wisdom appears in the book as a person and also as a special species God's gift within man. These two divine gifts act in a person identically and mutually and grow up both in one.

From another point of view ethical accents are for Sirach honest and truthful behavior in various aspects of human life. Another ethical aspect is cultivation of interpersonal relationships especially family and friendly. These theological and ethical accents in Sirach I opened with the help of different interpretations of the Bible, professional literature and theological dictionaries.

Sirach as author the one of deuthoronomy wisdom literature in the Bible speaks to man from the point of view of historical and contemporary. Reader of this book who is ready to open to possible correction his behavior and perception can find actions to Sirach's words true and full-fledged the way to God. Through this desire to lead a life in harmony with God's Law God loves man and fixes her gaze on him.